Citizenship, generational partnership and civil governance

Riccardo Cinquerani

The paper analyses the role of partnership in local governance processes focussing attention on the necessity of redesigning concepts such as partnership. Starting with a brief analysis of three concrete aspects of "new citizenship", (related to health policy, ethnic minorities and migration), it will be possible to underline how local dimension, subsidiarity, intergenerational dialogue, local partnership action and foresight approach, could contribute to deliver innovative forms of governance. The challenge will be the identification of a path or a model in which human resources become the core and strategic body of new forms of governance.
